The Bourbon Break-up in North Carolina.

The Charlotte Observer is the ablest and one of the oldest Democratic papers in North Carolina. In its last issue the editor, Charles R. Jones, announces himself as a candidate for Congress for the sixth district—the strongest Democratic district in the State. He says he does so as a Democrat, and adds:

Captain Payne hopes, by use of great diligence, to get himself in good shape to be "finally suppressed" again on the 20th instant.

There may be those who think it would have been better to have waited until a convention had been called for the district. This I have deliber-ately decided not to do, and if I shall be charged with party insubordination I rep'y that I have neither the time nor the inclination to go into the campaign by attempting to control the primary conventions. My sin so far consists in saying that 1 am willing to represent the district if I shall be alected. The people will decide that question and 1 shall cheerfully abide their decision.

The address of M. T.

of the district is three columns in length and is a very able, eloquent, substantial, and patriotic document. No Southern man has administered a severer rebuke to the abuses in Southern politics or exhibited a deeper contempt for the stolidity of Bourbon modes of thought than are contained in this address. He first predicts that the people will, in the coming contest in North Carolina, rise in their might and throw off the incubus of caucus dictation. He says: "I shall bear the banner of the freedom, liberty, and sovereignty that belongs to the people under the Constitution, both of the State and Nation, and I promise that it shall not trail in the dust." He then declares his convictions on the leading questions of the day. He alludes to the charges made of foul election methods in many parts of the country, and places himself "fairly upon the platform of absolute fairness in elections, to the end that the precise will of the people shall be established in the count so plainly that he who runs may read." He adds : And I now give notice that ONLY BY SUCH A PRO-CESS WILL I BE COUNTED OUT AFTER THE PROPLE

As lightning does the will of God." He then, in strong language, advocates the restoration to the people of the right to choose their own county governments. and in response to the plea of the Bourbon centralizers that the present system prevailed before the war, says: Many of the wise provisions of the Constitution of 1835 are no longer suited to the genius of our people. I live in an age of reform; of railroads telegraphs, and in an era of commerce and busihess enterprise unknown to our fathers. * * * party lives the world will k

A century of the enjoyment of civil liberty, add ed to the practical lessons we have been taught in the last twenty years, has given practical evidence of the great moral truth that, under a free government, the power of the intellect is the only ower that rules the affairs of men; and that virand intelligence should be the only passports

Is not this a fresh breeze? and will it not dispel some of the miasmatic vapors that float above the stagnant pools of Bourbonism? It is as though a blooded mag had broken loose from the plow in which, regardless of the fitness of things, he was being worked. Mr. Jones then most earnestly advocates the cause of general and free education. Of the colored race, in this connection, he says:

A very large proportion of our population were only a few years ago set free from a servitude that had extended over a period of three hundred years. The question before us to day is whether these people shall be educated up to a standard of morality and a knowledge of the duties of citize thip, or whether they shall continue to fill the jalls and penitentiaries of our own as well as those of ru generations. Ours is an Anglo-Saxon civilfestion, and God forbid that it should ever be anything else; but stern duty points us to the path of universal education of the white as well a black. Everybody will join me in saying that man, and a system of free education for their children. Mr. Jones winds up with a graphic contrast between the Southern statesmen "in the grand, good old days of the past," "content to entertain the public with fine spun theories of States' to Rights," and "the Northern Representative, less careful about the theories of government," who "had his arms up to the armpits in the Federal Treasury getting his appropriation." He declares that he would vote for public buildings, bridges, and railroads;" but higher, over, and above all," he adds, "I would dip down into the surplus revenues of an overflowing Federal treasury to find money to educate

The black voters of the sixth district can well afford to give their votes for such objects as these, if the advocate of them does not become entangled in the meshes of the Bourbon caucus system which, in its despair, may overlook his defiance of it, and surrender to his dictation. As an Independent candidate in opposition to a Bourbon caucus nominee, Mr. Jones ought to have the hearty support of every Republican in his district. We regard his ringing words as a new declaration of independence, and cannot doubt that behind him will be found thousands of men whose antecedents forced them to prefer Bourbons to "Radicals," but who are now determined to carve out new paths to progress, enlightenment, and honorable association with the great energizing forces of the North. With such elements the Republican party will find it profitable to fraternize, even if to do so it shall fold and tenderly lay away old bons to "Radicals," but who are now shall fold and tenderly lay away old battle flags, and cease to boast of having inaugurated the measures which are now the soul of such Southern Liberalism as we have quoted. All hail to the Bourbon break-up in North Carolina!

lican or Democratic parties,"

THE English holders of Virginia bonds have recently addressed a communica-tion to the President of the United States requesting him to interfere with that State's management of her own internal affairs. The utter ridiculousness of such a request shows that it was inspired by the Bourbon Funders of the Old Commonwealth. It is on a par with other movements of theirs, which have Readjuster party, and can but heap additional infamy upon the heads of the Virginia Bourbons.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE name of the Repression bill commends it to the cordial support of the House of Lords.

In the shrick of a 500-pound shell there is a persuasive eloquence that has never been compassed in the rhetoric of diplomates.

The chief object of Bourbon concernthat which thrills all the chords of the Bourbon heart with deep and tender pathos—is the preservation of the Re-publican party in the South intact and isolated. DEATH is scarcely more certain than the detection, disgrace, and punishment of postal peculators; but the news re-ports still show that a good many young nen are taking their chances in this terrible lottery.

How to straddle so as to make the enire person appear on both sides of the fence at the same moment is a difficult feat in political acrobatics; but the Ohi-Democrats mean to achieve this in their policy on the liquor question.

THE Democratic party are as coolly discussing an alleged proposition to sell Irish votes as if the Irish-Americans were tied up in bunches, like asparagus, to be sold at so much a bunch. The Land Leaguers will take notice.

How very mad Old Man Massey must have felt when he found himself openly accused of "affiliation" in the editorial columns of the central Democratic organ. We had never even expected that the old gentleman would "affiliate,"

A Montana paper tells of a corpse that was buried in a grave seven feet deep, but managed to reappear in the busy haunts of men, and is now hale and hearty. Such tenacity of life has been hitherto supposed to belong only to Dem-ocratic Presidential aspirants.

SHAKSPEARE'S remark that when the brains are out a man must die is indorsed by the Post. This may be the case with individuals, but so long as the Democratic party lives the world will know that brain is not essential to the existence of Capitalists need not take alarm at the mercurial rise during these bright summer days. Their gold will not melt till the heat reaches 1,983 degrees, and even the reviled and persecuted "In-God-We-Trust" dollar will hold its own against anything less than 1,850 degrees.

Let us be cheerful. Beyone Mr. Moody unlimbered his spiritual battery, with a view to the con-version of the French metropolis, he should read the thrilling story of that gallant little taurine quadruped that started out with the ground-plan and rear-elevation of a scheme for butting a dam, near Berlin. The principal figures in it are railway train off the track.

How very far behind the age our Mexfrow very far behind the age our siex-ican neighbors are is clearly shown by the fact that they are often hurt and sometimes killed when they go out on "the field of honor." They have got to learn from us that, when properly under-stood, no amusement is more eminently conducive to longevity than the duello.

It would be well for all philanthroists to remember that the one thing a man is the most likely to do, within certain limits, is the thing he is assured he must of the ills that wait on frail humanity an "Anglo-Saxon civilization," when they are to participate and have the equal rights of larger resistance are of doubtful utility.

The habits of men may be controlled, to a great extent by wholesome regulations, but restraints that inevitably provoke helmios Curis crowd. The gaug is now complete.—Peoria Transcript.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

Passage of the River and Harbor Bill-Sundry Civil Bill. The river and harbor bill was taken up, and various suggestions were made by Mr. McMillan and others, with a view to securing a final vote upon the bill yesterday.

Mr. Ingalls, believing that the friends of the bill had abandoned any purpose they had entertained of forcing the bill through under the gag law, said he would not insist upon separate votes upon all the amendments made by the Committee of the Whole.

An arrangement was finally effected to allow unlimited debate on the bill up to 4 o'clock; all debate to cesse and voting to begin at that hour upon the bill and all amendments then pending.

The Schate then preceded to act upon the amendments of the Committee of the Whole upon which separate votes were reserved.

The Hennepin Canal proposition as amended, to provide simply for surveys and examinations, was considered.

rovide simply for surveys and the words of the cause in the subsequent part of the amendment.

Mr. Alilson and Mr. Logan opposed the motion and contended that no intelligent report upon a survey could be made until after the route of the canal had been located; further, that the locating of the work did not thereby devolve upon the government any expense or responsibility.

Mr. Pendleton's motion was rejected—22 to 28.

The next amendment on which a vote was reserved was the one appropriating $20,000 for completing surveys of the Chespeake and Delawars ship canal,

Mr. Shallenberger submitted the conference report on the bill for the creetion of a public building at Fourhkeepsie. N. Y. The report, which fixes the amount of the appropriation at $75,000, was agreed to.

The flows then (11:10 a. m.) went into Committee of the Whole (Mr. Kasson in the chair) on the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. Shallenberger offered an amendment appropropriating $25,000 for the construction of an elevator in, and for repairs to, the building occupied by the Department of Justice, and known as the Freedman's Bank Building, in Washington, D. C. Adopted.

The clause appropriating £2,400,000 for public printing and binding gave rise to a general discussion on the subject of deficiencies in the public service. Mr. Atkins, of Tennes-ee, and Mr. Randall, of Pennsylvania, contending that such deficiencies arose through executive maladininistration, while Mr. Hiscock, of New York, and Mr. Robeson, of New Jersey, maintained that they arose through tecessity, and not through violation of law. The clause authorizing the republication of the reports of the United States Supreme Court upon which the copyright has expired having been reacted, Mr. Neal, of Ohio, offered an amendment providing that the republication shall be carried on at the public printing office, and that the reports shall be sold at cost price with tenper cent, additional. Adopted.

A chause appropriating $900 to pay James L. Andens for reporting testimony before the Committees on Forcing Affairs and Public Buildings and Grounds gave rise to a discussion upon the subject of the recent removal of the committee stenographers, Messrs. Hayes and Devine. The debate was conflued to a consideration of the question as to the construction of the words "for cause," Messrs. Horrand Robeson and other Republicans took the ground that it was within the province of the Speaker to determine upon the cause without declaring that cause to the House.

Mr. Wilson took the same ground, but held that the House might call upon the Speaker to announce his cause.

Mr. Randall, Mr. Cox, and Mr. Springer maintained that the cause must be stated to the House, and for an hour and a half the debate continued with much emphasis on both sides. Mr. Blackburn, of Kentnecky, offered an amendment for the payment of one month's extra salary to the announce his cause.

Mr. Randall, Mr. Cox, and Mr. Springer maintained that the cause must be stated to the House, Mr. Holman, of Indiana, rais

Bathing Costumes.

A lady who was preparing bathing suits for a trip East for the summer wrote to an Eastern fashion paper to know what style of bathing suits would be for children, say from five to six years old. She received a reply that this year the bathing suits for boys were very simple, consisting of a wad of cotton in each ear. The lady will add to this suit a red yarn string around her boy's neck and let him go loose.
